Keep Ireland Nazi-Free

People were shocked at the ugly scenes of fascist violence at the Lansdowne Road match last February. It brought home to many Irish people the brutal reality of fascism—a brutal reality that many ordinary black people suffer across Europe.

In Britain, Combat 18 is whipping up racism in football. In Italy, born-again fascist ministers give cover to the black-shirt thugs on the streets. In the upcoming French elections, Jean-Marie Le Pen threatens to get around one-sixth of the vote.

The lesson is that where they are opposed, their influence declines. The Anti Nazi League in Britain has proved that the BNP's support can be dented when anti-fascists are mobilised on demonstrations and in the areas where they try to organise. Beackon was not elected a second time in the Isle of Dogs.

Governments across Europe are unable to solve unemployment and poverty. They scapegoat immigrants for the problems they cannot solve. Ireland has those same problems and, as history shows, is not immune to fascism. We have to oppose fascism to ensure that it will never get an echo here.

This year, fifty years on from the liberation of the nazi death camps, Irish anti-fascists must send out that message loud and clear. That's what the march on 22 April is all about.

The Anti Nazi League in Ireland has gathered tremendous support from anti-fascists here. On our 50th commemoration of the liberation of Auschwitz earlier this year, many joined our torchlight procession in Dublin.

We were at the forefront of exposing the fascist links of a racist "professor" in Coleraine, Richard Lynn. His phoney research now stands discredited as racist.

We need to build on the wide support that we have received.

Help to keep Ireland fascist-free. Join the march on Saturday April 22nd at 2.00 at Parnell Square.

Bring along your friends. If you would like to help us build support for the march, send in the slip below and we'll be in touch.
